Point of Care Echo One image, 3 Questions ? Dr D Priya Dr R Beese MRCP FRCR

With one image taken of the heart in the short axis parasternal view 3 questions can be answered Is there a pericardial effusion ? .

What is the left ventricular function,

3 is there right heart ventricular dilatation suggestive of a pulmonary embolus ?. There questions are of utmost importance in pateints with chest pain and breathlessness a common medical presentation.

This imaging and diagnosis is of most use in A/E resuscitation and Intensive care uits.

Emergency settings of Pocus Echo

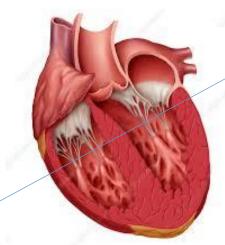

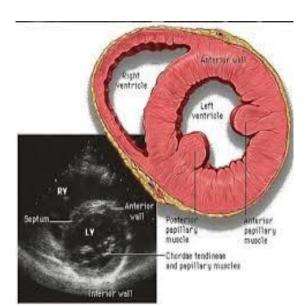

A 50 year old male presents to A/E with a past history of MI and breathlessness, the Left heart is dilated consistent with left heart failure

A 30 week pregnant patient presents to A/E with chest pain and breathlessness, the ultrasound demonstrates a dilated right heart consistent with a possible pulmonary embolus

A 20 year old patient presents with breathlessness after a viral infection , the ultrasound demonstrates a pericardial effusion.